

Sabin Oral Vaccine Should Cut Polio Threat to Minimum

By K. H. SUTHERLAND, M.D. County Health Officer

From the standpoint of public acceptance there is little comparison between the Salk and the Sabin polio vaccines. For many individuals it is simply the difference between getting four or more painful "shots" as against eating three lumps of granulated sugar on which a little vaccine has been dropped.

Few people will ponder very long on which type to take, particularly as scientists now think that the easy-to-take Sabin oral vaccine may provide a longer lasting immunization against polio than the Salk vaccine.

The Salk vaccine is produced from killed viruses and contains all three types of poliovirus strains. It therefore gives protection against all forms of the disease, but complete immunity is not afforded until the series of injections is completed. This usually takes from several months to a year.

ON THE other hand, the Sabin vaccine is a live poliovirus immunizing agent which has been modified (weakened) for the purpose of conferring immunity without producing illness. It is presently given in three doses, each containing a different type of polio virus, and each is given separately by mouth four to six weeks apart.

Type I is given first, and in about a week the individual is fully protected against the poliovirus strains that cause about 85 per cent of paralytic polio. Type II is given next followed by Type III, and in a comparatively short time effective protection against the disease is complete.

In the case of infants and small children, the vaccine may be administered directly into the mouth with a medicine dropper, or the drops may be put on a spoon and given to the child in a small amount of water or simple syrup.

No unfavorable reactions have been observed following the use of the Sabin vaccine. At least none have been reported following its administration in mass trial programs held in the United States and Great Britain, and also in Mexico, Czechoslovakia, and the U.S.S.R.

THOUGH THE oral vaccine may be given with perfect safety, Dr. Sabin does not advise its use in cases of acute illness where there is an elevation of temperature or when the illness resembles the paralytic stage of polio (sore throat, fever, muscular weakness and so forth). Certain enteric (gastrointestinal) infections would also render the vaccine ineffective as these bacteria have an inhibiting effect on the vaccine.

Even those persons who have had a complete course of the Salk vaccine are advised to take the oral vaccine. It will immunize those individuals who failed to achieve immunity from the injections or who have lost it. In any case, it will give a powerful boost to any existing immunity.

Individuals who have had an attack of polio should also take the oral live virus vaccine. Such persons may be immune to only one type of poliovirus and remain vulnerable to the other two.

MASS SABIN oral vaccine makes the largest number of intestinal tracts resistant to all poliovirus types in the shortest possible time and thus breaks the chain of poliovirus transmission, since it is in the intestinal tract that the polio virus multiplies.

For this reason, mass immunization with the Sabin vaccine is advocated as it is through this means that the community can be freed from the pathogenic disease-causing polio virus, and "wild" virus strains can be more quickly starved out.

Many millions of people in this country are still unprotected against polio or are only partially protected. With both the Salk and Sabin polio vaccines now available, complete eradication of the disease is probably not far distant.

The S.O.S. (Sabin Oral Sunday) program will start in this area in October and is sponsored by the various county medical associations in Southern California. The small donation of 25 cents per dose, which is asked only from those persons who are able to contribute, is probably the best 25 cents worth of anything that anyone could get.

Merit Carson Unit Opens for Inspection

Merit Carson, a 78-unit own-your-own apartment project, will be open to the public Saturday and Sunday from noon to dark. The opening of the project will feature tours and refreshments.

Included in the project are 78 two- and three-bedroom units which feature nylon carpeting, built-in kitchen features, draperies, birch cabinets, and mosaic tile bathrooms.

PRICES FOR the unique apartments begin at $15,900.

Purchasers receive a grant deed to the all-electric medalion apartments, and a policy of title insurance.

Other features in the unit include a community recreation room equipped with a barbecue unit, shuffle board, and other recreation facilities.

Residents are restricted to families who have no pets or children under 16. Information is available by calling the sales office at 320-5140, or by visiting the project, located on Carson Street east of the Del Amo Center.

Low blood pressure is usually an asset, because it places less strain on the heart and arteries, says the Heart Assn.
